Work Stopped At Mokena Mill

Mokena Grade A Milk Ordinance Set Back A Year

The Mokena Village board had quite a number of important matters under consideration at their meeting Tuesday night.

The grade A milk ordinance which was passed sometime ago and which was to have gone into effect by November first, has been set back another year so as to enable the local dairies to secure the needed equipment for converting their present type of dairy over to the production of grade A milk. The needed equipment is impossible to get at the present time.

Need New Pump

The pump on the village well is just about worn out and it is feared may give out at any time in which event the village would be up against a tough problem. A new pump is being considered and estimates are being received from pump dealers for a new outfit. It is understood that priority will first have to be obtained from Washington before a new pump can be installed. The board is pushing the matter along so as to get the new outfit soon as possible in the meantime trusting that the old pump will hold together for awhile.

Fire Truck To Be Overhauled

The fire truck also came in for much discussion. A new motor truck will have to be installed to replace the one which was cracked last winter. It was also decided not to let the truck be used for pumping out basements, flushing out tiles, etc. No one in particular is taking care of the truck and the board felt that if one or two men would look after the upkeep of the truck it could be kept in good condition.

Water Meter Troubles

George Knudson, village treasurer reported many complaints from village water users that their water meters are not operating correctly, many objecting to the bills for water on the ground that they had not used as much water as the meters registered. Many water users kept a hose running all night and also often in day time and do not realize how much water is used in this manner.

Boys Reckless With Guns

Small boys about the village have been endangering other people with their reckless shooting of bb guns and air rifles. Several instances were reported where shots whizzed by people in their yards while boys were shooting at birds in nearby trees. One case is reported where a .22 rifle shot went thru a window but luckily did not hit anyone. Mayor Harry F. Mall requests that anyone seeing boys with guns report the matter to him or to any member of the village board. It is against the village ordinances to discharge fire arms of any kind within the village limits.

MISS AUDREY TRULL MARRIED AT UPPER DABY, PENN.

Miss Audrey Trull, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Steinhagen Trull, of Upper Darby, Pa., and Mr. James Murdoch of Philadelphia, Pa., were quietly married Monday, Aug. 28 at 2 p.m. at Upper Darby, Pa. Miss Iona Enders, daughter of Mr. Fred Enders of Orland township, and cousin of the bride served as maid of honor. The groom was attended by his pal Norman Boggs of Philadelphia. A wedding supper was served at the bride's home. The newly weds spent their honeymoon at Atlantic City, N. J. Miss Gertrude Henning of Palos Park accompanied Iona to Upper Darby and before returning home spent a few days visiting at Atlantic City, N. J.

Mrs. Trull is a daughter of the late Mary Steinhagen and is a former resident of Orland Park. While Iona Enders was away, her sister Phyllis of Midlothian, took over the duties in the farm home.

"BUYS" HIMSELF PIECE OF THE AIR FORCE

Cpl. Philip J. Brock of Mokena has "bought himself a piece of the air force". He was among the first soldiers stationed on this Eighth Fighter Command Mustang base to make a purchase in the War Bond campaign staged by the Eighth Air Force to buy a "Victory Squadron", and each officer and enlisted man buying bonds in the drive becomes a "shareholder".

A quota was assigned to personnel of this base under the command of Col. Wm. J. Cummings Jr., Lawrence, Kas. They were allowed five weeks in which to strive to attain the goal. They rocketed past the quota mark less than two weeks after the drive had opened.

Brock is on duty in the base motor pool.

Fire Damages Frankfort Home Quite Badly

Damage estimated to exceed a thousand dollars was the result of a fire at the home of Wm. Lorenzen, southeast of Frankfort last Thursday evening.

The fire is thought to have been started by an explosion of a kerosene stove which was lighted shortly before Mr. Lorenzen and his son Norman left to do the chores. Upon returning they found the kitchen afire and filled with smoke. Their prompt action with buckets of water and the assistance of neighbors saved the building. The loss was covered by insurance. Mrs. Lorenzen was not at home at the time.

REPAVING PART OF LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Construction work has begun on repaving a portion of the Lincoln Highway east of the Cleveland school to the four corners at Frankfort.

A sharp curve in the old highway is being eliminated by building a new portion of the pavement on a straight line. Graders have been at work the past week grading for the new road bed.

The elimination of curves in highways not only adds to the safety of driving, but also makes for easier driving.

BAKED HAM AND BEANS SEPT. 14, TINLEY PARK

The dinner the Women of the Tinley Park Methodist church will serve from 5 to 8 p.m. on September 14 will be Baked Ham and Baked Beans. Of course all the extras that go with this combination will be served to give you one of the best dinners you have had. The women work hard to prepare these dinners and a good attendance is always appreciated. The price is always right, so if you haven't attended lately do so this month. We have family tables so you and your friends may enjoy your meal. Mrs. Mildred Bettenhausen is the chairman of the dinner.

Fire Threatens Palos Community Center Foundation

Monday, September 4 the Palos Heights and Orland Park fire departments were called to a fire at the Community Center Foundation in Palos Park. A huge stack of baled hay was ablaze and was under control before it spread to some of the near buildings.

Mokena Service Group To Hold Card Party For Xmas Box Fund

Everything is in readiness for the Card and Bunco party Saturday evening, September 16 in the Mokena School auditorium at 8 o'clock given by the Mokena Women's Service Club for the benefit of the Servicemen's Christmas fund.

Everyone in the community should patronize liberally this party in some way, by attendance, buying tickets, etc., as much money is needed to send a Christmas box to each Serviceman from Mokena.

Also that same evening, the $25 War Bond and $5 Defense Stamp as well as several Victory Baskets will be awarded.

Come out and have a good time and help a good cause.

HOMER 4-H CLUB REPRESENTED AT THE PEOTONE FAIR

The Homer 4H club was represented at the final show of the 4H Exhibit at the Peotone fair last Saturday by six girls and three boys. They each had several displays.

Poultry was shown by Don White, Chas. Jungles, Ralph Reiter, Eleanor Kopelman and Adella Reiter; Anna Mae Branke showed ducks.

Rose Brankey, Eleanor Kopelman and Arlene Reiter had garden displays, Joyce Reiter showed a Hereford steer, and Anna Mae Brankey and Eleanor Kopelman had flower exhibits.

These young people came home waving the colors of red, white and blue, colors of the American flag. The garden exhibits were also carried out in the V formation. James Toncray, also a member of the club was present but did not show his work this year. Ralph Reiter Sr. is the leader of the local club.

FRANKFORT 4-H CLUB TOURED ELWOOD ORDNANCE PLANT

The Frankfort 4H Snip and Snack club members toured the Elwood Ordnance Plant last Friday. At the main building they were issued their passes and were given a talk by the Assistant manager as to how the plant operates. They then boarded a bus which took them on a 2 1/2 hour tour on the Ordnance property. Different buildings were viewed and as each one approached they were told of what took place in that particular building. They visited the power house where they saw TNT.

The trip was very educational and was enjoyed by all. The girls motored to the home of Willa and Donna Oetter at Andres where a hamburger fry was enjoyed. A short meeting was held and songs were sung. Bonnie Krapf, Corrine Krapf and Joan Brooks each gave a talk. Games were played. A friendship circle was formed and taps were sung. Marshmallows were toasted and the meeting adjourned. Sept. 16 the first meeting of the Winter club will be held. The leader Mrs. Norman Krapf and the assistant Miss June Groth will sponsor this meeting.

The club had an exhibit booth at the Will County Fair at Peotone and received 1st prize.

RALLY DAY TO BE OBSERVED SEPT. 10.

SYRUP FLOWS LIKE WATER ONLY LOT MORE STICKY

The Service Bakery in Tinley had a sweet and sticky time Thursday afternoon when a 700 pound wooden barrel of syrup broke open and the syrup flowed like water on the bakery floor. The barrel was being unloaded from a truck when the head suddenly gave away. Some of the men in the vicinity of the barrel waded around in the syrup like flies on sticky fly paper.

Employees Walk Out In AFL Sympathy Strike

Employees of the Mokena Wallpaper Mill walked out in a sympathy strike Tuesday morning. The local strike was not aimed solely at the local mill, but is part of a general strike of AFL wallpaper workers which has closed the entire industry. Several thousand workers employed in wallpaper manufacturing companies thruout the country went on an industry wide strike Tuesday morning, it was announced by officials of the United Wallpaper Factories, which operate several plants in the Chicago area.

The workers are members of the United Wallpaper Craftsmen of North America, an AFL affiliate. They are said to have struck simultaneously thruout the nation upon instruction from union officials who for the last month have been negotiating a new contract with representatives of the Wallpaper Institute, an association controlling the industry in New York.

Company spokesmen said they understood negotiations still were in process when the strike was called. Two of the 28 points demanded in the new contract by the union which met opposition were said to be a 20 per cent wage increase and institution of the check off system.

NEW LENOX LUTHERAN CHURCH TO CONDUCT UNIQUE PRAYER SERVICE

On the afternoon of November 12 Trinity Lutheran church of New Lenox, together with other Lutheran churches of Chicagoland, will hold a unique service of prayer. The congregation will join in prayer on that day, not only with other congregations, but with the boys of the congregation who are in the service of their country. They will receive a copy of the service for that day, including the sermon that the pastor will preach.

At exactly 4 p.m. of that day the congregation will join in the prayer, the identical prayer that the boys will be praying, at the same time.

The Rev. James G. Manz, pastor of the church will also be happy to send the service and prayer to men and women in the armed forces who are not members of the congregation. Friends and members of the church are therefore asked to give, or send him the names and addresses of their loved ones, to enable them to join in this service.

The service in the church, which will be in addition to the regular morning service will begin at 3:15 p.m. of that day and at exactly 4 p.m. the congregation will begin the prayer.

"Be with them, Pray with them", November 12 at 4 p.m.

Washington, D. C.

PRESIDENT AND WILLKIE

Only insiders know it, but after the President held his press conference denying he had sent a letter to Wendell Willkie, Judge Sam Rosenman and Steve Early rushed up to his desk and remonstrated that he had made a bad mistake. They were afraid FDR had rebuffed the man who had gone down the line for him 100 per cent on taxes, foreign policy and the war.

"They caught me a little unprepared on that one," the President admitted ruefully. "However, I tried to tell them it was a personal question. I didn't want to embarrass Willkie by letting people think he and I had a political deal."

Later, the President repeated to some of his cabinet that he hadn't expected the question at his news conference. Explaining that he wanted to talk to Willkie about post-war peace plans and foreign policy, not politics, he indicated that he would go ahead with his plans for the talk regardless of what had happened.

The President was quite irked that news about his letter to the former Presidential candidate had leaked out. Only a few people knew the letter existed. The carbon copy was not filed with his regular correspondence, and the first draft of the letter had been written in his own handwriting for Grace Tully, his secretary, to copy.

Despite this, Willkie began to get queries about the letter two weeks after he received it. The news men making the inquiries cited White House sources, said they had the tip from Presidential secretaries. Willkie made no comment, never admitted receiving the letter, but he got the impression that the White House wanted the story out.

Therefore, you could have knocked him over with a feather when the President replied to news men last week that he didn't know anything about writing Willkie a letter.

Immediately after the White House denial appeared in the press, Willkie's phone began buzzing with Republican friends warning him that Roosevelt would always kick him in the teeth. They urged him to come out for Dewey.

ARMY DEMOBILIZATION PLAN
Here is the inside story on White House-war department plans for demobilizing part of the army after the defeat of Germany. The war department is planning to release about 2,000,000 men immediately after a German armistice.

Under this plan, the army will set up a point system for every man in the service, and men with sufficient points will be retired. Here is how the points will be calculated:

1. For each month in the service, every man will receive one point.
2. Each month overseas will count an additional point.
3. For each battle honor, a man will receive four points.
4. The congressional medal of honor or legion of merit will count four additional points.
5. Each bronze star denoting service in battle will count four additional points.
6. For every child, a soldier will receive eight points.
7. Married men without children will also receive eight extra points.

There are still several important gaps in this program which the army and the White House have not yet filled in. There still is no special credit for age. However, it is already decided that, because the army will have a greater need for air men in the Pacific, a separate system will be set up for discharging air corps veterans. Of course, the basic point which everybody wants to know is: "How many points will a man need to get out?" That has not yet been determined.

It has been determined, however, that at the end of the Atlantic war, the navy does not plan to release any of its men.

It can also be revealed that President Roosevelt is anxious to discharge hardship cases first.

When the President discussed this plan recently with several senators, they asked him how he planned to handle the problem of policing Germany and other occupied enemy territory after the armistice. He replied that he hoped to do so by using men who have learned to like the army, plus professional soldiers who were in the army before the selective service program got under way. He also plans to use men who have had no overseas experience and want to volunteer for it now.

Captured 700 Nazi Prisoners

Serpt. Rodney Cloutman, 26, of Athol, Mass., (left) singlehandedly captured 400 Nazi prisoners, the offspring of Sergeant York. Like York, he was armed only with a rifle. Capt. J. R. Willingham, Tuscaloosa, Ala., (right) captured 300 Germans by circling overhead in plane and herding them to the Allied armored columns who took charge. Due to this exploit, he has been called the "flying cowboy" of the American Air forces. The German prisoners stated that they were tired of fighting and in addition were afraid of being fired upon.

Funeral of 'The Powerful One'

Killed by mortar fire in the town square of Florence shortly after the Allies entered the city, the body of "Il Potente" (The Powerful One), leader of the Arno division of the Garibaldi patriots, is being borne through the city while townspeople salute from the sidewalks. Entry of Allies was signal for outbreak against Fascists.

Collaborationist

A French girl, resident of Laval, France, who allegedly collaborated with the Nazis when they controlled the town, is paraded about the streets marked with a swastika, after the liberation of the village by American troops.

Flour Supply Line

Italian patriots form a supply line to carry flour across the blasted Ponte Vecchio to where it was badly needed on the other side of the river. The Germans blew up the historic bridge to prevent its use by the advancing Allies.

Captured Weapons

Chinese soldiers who captured Tapa, one of the Jap strong points near Lungling on the Burma road, look over a mass of weapons and supplies abandoned by the Japs as they fled to the hills before the advancing Chinese in Salween river campaign. Chinese soldiers have put these arms to good use.

Represents Dewey

John Foster Dulles, prominent New York lawyer, has been named by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, to represent him in postwar plan talks.

DAVID ANOINTED KING

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 16:1-5, 11-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.—1 Samuel 16:7.

Outward appearance, by which man judges, is almost always deceptive. God knows the heart and is able to evaluate a man correctly. In calling David, the ruddy shepherd boy, to be king, God cut across the ideas of men, but He was, as always, right.

I. A Man from God's Storehouse (v. 1)—"I have provided."

God's great storehouses are full of blessings, material and spiritual, but He also has a great and constantly replenished reserve of men and women from which He calls and sends them forth. The thing we must guard against is the setting of hindrances in His holy way, either in our own lives or in the lives of others.

A man power shortage is very serious, for it simply cuts off the stream of production without which action becomes impossible. There should never be any shortage of man power in the Lord's work, and there would never be any if all His creation were willingly subject to Him.

God was ready to set aside Saul, and He had David ready. Samuel the prophet was still grieving over Saul's failure. In a sense that feeling for Saul was most commendable, but it could not go on.

When men, even of our own families or circle of friends, persist in rebellion against the Lord, we must not let our grief hold us back, but move on with the man of God's choice.

II. A Man Who Had to Be Sought (vv. 2-5)—"Send and fetch him."

Usually those who are quick to offer themselves for an important place are not the ones for the place. And those who are sitting around doing nothing but waiting for some honor to come to them, are not the ones to choose.

"Let the office seek the man" is the highest ground, even in politics; surely it must be the proper procedure in spiritual activity.

David might well have wanted to be at the place of sacrifice and the feast that day, but since all his family were there, and someone had to care for the sheep, he did it. A man like that, hard at his work, is well worth seeking when something important needs to be done.

The interesting story of Samuel's effort to find one among Jesse's seven sons (vv. 6-10) is well worth reading. Samuel still had the idea that a king must be prepossessing and able to thrill men by his appearance. He should have learned better from his experience with Saul.

God put him right (v. 7), and we do well to renew our thinking on that point. The world is in a place where many leaders must be chosen in the months and years just ahead. Will we be eager and willing to have God lead us in our choice? Or will we be swayed by personal interests or political expediency?

III. A Man of Spirituality (vv. 11-13)—"The Spirit of the Lord came upon David."

The Holy Spirit, ever active in all periods of Bible history, became the abiding presence in the believer's heart after Pentecost, but during the Old Testament period He came on chosen individuals for a particular work. As David was anointed king the Spirit came upon him for that service. In spite of his failings (when he forgot the Lord) David was throughout his reign a spiritually-minded man who wanted God's will and His glory to be preeminent.

God never calls a man without enabling him for his task, and the chief and indispensable enabling is that of the Holy Spirit's power. Like David, we may enter upon a God-appointed responsibility without fear or question, simply trusting the Holy Spirit to take, transform, empower, and use us for God's glory.

IV. A Man Willing to Serve (vv. 14-18).

Upon Saul there came tremendous moods of despondency. These were "from the Lord" (v. 14) in the sense that God permitted His disobedient and rejected servant to suffer the result of his self-will and failure. How awful it is for anyone to be out of the will of God and conscious of His disapproval.

To help Saul in those dark hours David, the sweet singer of Israel, was willing to serve with his voice and his harp. How many thousands of times David has served all the generations since with his psalms. He was a man of gifts, gladly given for the Lord and for others.

Bear in mind that while David was not yet publicly crowned, he was already anointed to be king. Yet he was ready to serve the one whose place he was to take even in his hours of dejection and hateful ill-will.

Expand Wash Stand To Fit Large Space

IT IS easy enough to make a small serving table out of an old wash stand but, when there is a large wall space crying for an imposing piece of furniture and nothing but a small wash stand on hand, the problem is something else again. Here you see the solution achieved with odds and ends of lumber, a pair of wooden boxes, a little paint and some plain gingham with the old wash stand at the center of it all.

The lower sketch shows how the carpenter work was done. Note the piece across the bottom of the stand to cover the irregular line, also the hinged arms so that the skirt may open out, and the piece across the top of the stand to make it the same thickness as the arms.

NOTE—This furniture remodeling idea is from BOOK 7 which contains directions for more than 30 other ways to use things on hand and inexpensive new materials to make your home attractive. Send for this book today. It will help you keep your home fresh and gay while you save money for bonds and war stamps. Copies of BOOK 7 are 15 cents each. Order from:

Dose of Laughter Gives Stimulus and Relaxation

If laughter could be ordered at the drugists, any doctor would prescribe many laughs every day. A dose of laughter is a combination of stimulus like that of vitamin tablets plus the relaxation of bromides. Laughter is exercise for the diaphragm, which is neglected in most exercises except deep breathing.

If you could X-ray yourself when you laugh, you would see astonishing results. Your diaphragm goes down, down, and your lungs expand. You are taking more oxygen than usual and that oxygen passes into the blood exposed in your lungs. As you laugh, the rate of exposure to oxygen is doubled or trebled. A surge of power runs from head to toes.

Few people realize that health actually varies according to the amount of laughter. So does recovery. People who laugh actually live longer than those who do not laugh.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Forty-four-year-old Wilbert Winkle, who operates a repair shop in the back of his home, is notified by his draft board that he is in I-A. He breaks the bad news to his domineering wife, Amy, who is quite perturbed. On arriving at camp Mr. Winkle is given his physical, and to his great surprise and dismay, is accepted for the army. He takes the oath of enlistment and gets so many "shots" he cannot remember just what they all are for. He is sent to Camp Squibb, a thousand miles from home, where he meets Mr. Tinker, a man of his own age. Mr. Winkle gets KP and some bayonet practice, in which he does not do so well.

CHAPTER VIII

Once more Mr. Winkle fired the machine gun. By moving it about sufficiently he managed to send several bullets where they were supposed to go. He clung to the trigger desperately, hoping to do well, if only by accident.

The Sergeant had to yell for him to stop. "Pop," the Alphabet told him fondly, "if it was anybody except you, I'd know he was gold-bricking. In that case I'd make him into the best machine-gunner on the range. But I guess you and any kind of a gun ain't the kind to make friends. You got to learn some more, but you'll never learn much."

He clung to the trigger desperately, hoping to do well, if only by accident.

All right, Private Tindall, let's see what the master mind can do."

Freddie sat nonchalantly at the gun. It was the first time he had followed an order with any kind of grace. He looked around. The Lieutenant was far down the line.

"You see that target?" Freddie asked Sergeant Czeideskrowski. "That's you."

"Shoot the gun instead of your mouth," Jack advised.

Freddie glared at him. Freddie took his time at the gun. Finally he fired. Delicately he handled the bouncing death. He sliced the up and down marks on the target. He sliced those running across. He cut to ribbons those marked on a slant.

When he was through he asked triumphantly of the Sergeant, "How do you like yourself now?"

The Alphabet regarded the target with regretful admiration. "If there was somebody else than a rat who did that," he observed, "it would be One-A nice and I would send him a gold-engraved invitation to join the machine-gun crew I think the Lieutenant's going to let me make up."

The first Mr. Winkle knew of it was the sound of loud voices coming from the rear of the barracks. Running out with other men, he discovered that Jack hadn't waited to get Freddie away from camp.

When Mr. Winkle rushed forward to stop it, he was caught and held by one of the huge arms of Mr. Tinker, who advised fiercely, "Let'm alone."

The battle was progressing on pretty much of an even basis by the time the Alphabet arrived on the scene. Afterward, Freddie claimed that he was swinging at Jack when he hit the Sergeant. Jack recounted the same tale when one of his blows caught the Alphabet instead, and in his case he was sincere but not appreciated by the higher authorities.

As they were led off to the Lieutenant by Sergeant Czeideskrowski, Jack called to Mr. Winkle, "Please don't."

"I won't," promised Mr. Winkle. He didn't even write home about the incident when both the warriors were given terms in the stockade.

Mr. Winkle was ordered to report to the orderly room. Wondering what serious breach of military etiquette he had committed, he departed to the accompaniment of encouraging remarks from his comrades.

"It was nice knowing you, Pop."

"When you get to England, drop us a card."

The Lieutenant leaned back in his chair behind his desk and regarded him. "Getting along all right?" he asked.

"Yes, sir—that is, I hope so, sir." "We're satisfied with you in most respects, if that's what you mean. Like the Army?"

"I like it, sir." Mr. Winkle knew this to be the stock answer to the question.

The Lieutenant seemed to know it, too, and to want a little more information, for he rephrased the question. "Happy in it?"

Mr. Winkle hesitated.

"Answer just the way you feel," the Lieutenant instructed.

"Well, I can't say I'm happy, sir. I'm not exactly a fighter, that is, with my fists, so to speak. And being away from my wife and . . ."

"Your regular work? You miss that?"

"Yes, sir. But I recognize why I'm here."

"You know the new regulations that went into effect the other day. You're over thirty-eight and can get a discharge if you go into a war industry. Why haven't you applied?"

Amy had written that she would leave it up to him, and that she would be proud of him no matter what he decided. As yet he hadn't given her a formal answer. Now he prepared it.

"I'd like to stay in the Army," he heard himself telling the Lieutenant. "If you want me."

The Lieutenant glanced at him once, with approval. "I'm going to ask you one more question, Winkle. Think it over before you answer. Are you afraid?"

"Don't be ashamed of it," the Lieutenant advised. He smiled. "If you'd told me you weren't afraid, I would have known you weren't speaking the truth. And I don't mean you alone, but all the men including myself. It's a normal thing, like being nervous before making a speech. Usually you make a better speech because you're nervous. It's the same way with fighting. Fear makes you more aware, keener, alert—a better fighter. No soldier has ever gone into battle without being afraid—if he has, there was something the matter with him."

"Don't connect my lecture," the Lieutenant went on, "with the fact that I'm recommending you for the Motor Mechanics School. I simply feel that's where you belong, by previous experience, and at your age. And you may have to fight there, or be so close to it that it's virtually the same thing. That's all, and good luck to you."

It was a moment before Mr. Winkle could scramble to his feet and salute. "Good luck to you, sir—that is, thank you, sir."

Mr. Winkle felt that the Army had something of a soul after all. While he didn't exactly walk on air, which was impossible, anyway, being an Army mechanic was work he would like better than marching or shooting. At least it found a round hole for him to fit in more comfortably than the one he now occupied.

Mr. Tinker, on the other hand, when the reclassification notices were posted on the bulletin board and his name was listed with that of Mr. Winkle, was not pleased.

"Me!" he complained. "I ain't in the Army to be a nursemaid to a jeep. It ain't right! It ain't right for a minute!"

"You better write to the Secretary of War about it," advised one of his squad who was remaining an infantryman. "You just write to him and he'll fix it up for you."

The Messrs. Winkle and Tinker moved in new circles.

They changed to barracks at one of the far ends of Camp Squibb, so many miles away that it might have been a different world. Their associates were all mechanically inclined individuals. These spoke their language better than had their previous companions, and over them all was a slightly technical aura.

Their office during business hours was a large, hangar-like building. Two lines of engines, mounted on high wooden frames, were placed down its length. On these they worked, in select groups of four, with a Technical Corporal over each quartet, and a supervising Captain miraculously clad in coveralls like their own.

Mr. Winkle, who could repair anything, here really learned about Army regulations, which presumed that he knew nothing about a combustion engine. They also held that there was only one way to do a specified job, the Army way, and that anything else might as well not exist.

"We will now," lectured his Corporal instructor, "locate the trouble in this engine, which won't run." To illustrate, he turned on the ignition and pressed the starter with his hand. The motor turned over, but refused to start. The Corporal looked about at his four men, peering at their nameplates. "Winkle, you take it."

Mr. Winkle, who had been regarding the engine idly, had already noticed the trouble. "Why," he said, "the carburetor's out of adjustment."

He swiped briefly but expertly at the carburetor with his screw driver, snapped on the ignition, pressed the starter, and the motor roared.

The Corporal, looking appologetic, gestured wildly for him to shut it off.

Mr. Winkle obeyed. Indignantly, the Corporal put the carburetor out of adjustment again and then addressed Mr. Winkle severely, a good deal put out that this little ruse had been discovered so easily.

"Look," he said, "here we work up to be Thomas A. Edison slow-like. Starting from the ground. I think you heard the Captain mention something about procedure sheets. You got yours?"

Mr. Winkle held it up.

"What's it say you do?"

"First," Mr. Winkle read, "'crank engine by starter; if engine fires but motor won't run, pour gas in the carburetor.'"

"Now you got the idea," the Corporal ordered.

Mr. Winkle cranked the engine, which fired but didn't run. He took up a can and poured gasoline in the carburetor and tried again. The engine ran for a moment and then spluttered to a stop.

Mr. Winkle glanced longingly at the carburetor adjustment and then consulted his procedure sheet once more.

He learned he now knew that the seat of the trouble was the fuel system. He checked the gas supply, the lines and the connections. Finally he came, according to procedure, to the carburetor. He swiped with his screw driver again, and this time, when he pushed the starter, Army procedure was triumphant.

When he shut off the engine, he stood back with a puzzled expression on his face. "Can I ask a question, Corporal?"

"Something you don't understand?"

"Well," proposed Mr. Winkle, "supposing I'm out in a stalled truck with the enemy after me. Do I go through the procedure and get captured, or do I adjust the carburetor and escape?"

He knew by now it was heresy to make such inquiries, but the answer to this one worried him genuinely.

The Corporal regarded him witheringly. "Maybe your skin will tell you that if you think it's worth saving."

Mr. Winkle and his friend, Mr. Tinker, were in town to celebrate their completing the Motor Mechanics course and having received their certificates of graduation.

They stood outside the bar Mr. Tinker patronized. Mr. Winkle was about to be on his way down the street alone, as usual, leaving Mr. Tinker to the attractions within. Mr. Tinker had been wishing that he would join him this time. "How about it?" he inquired.

"Getting along all right?" he asked.

"No," Mr. Winkle replied judiciously, "I don't think so."

"I know you're married and all, but that ain't any reason you can't enjoy yourself."

Mr. Winkle shook his head. "I ain't trying to get you to do anything you don't want to do," argued Mr. Tinker.

While they stood discussing it, with Mr. Tinker making most of the comments, they saw two soldiers coming along the street. One was Jack, but they couldn't believe their eyes at first when they recognized the other.

They hadn't seen Jack or Freddie since the fight. Incredible rumors, which they refused to accept, had reached them that Freddie had finally been broken into small pieces and was being put together again in another form.

Now the soldier on Jack's arm stood straight. He was confident, but not arrogant. And no mustache blackened his upper lip, which was shaven clean.

Mr. Tinker was the first to speak, to Freddie. "That ain't you, Tindall."

Mr. Winkle stared, perplexed, from one to the other of the young men. "It can't be," he said.

Jack laughed. "Sure it is. He's an Army lug now." He nudged Freddie. "Go on, yardbird, speak your piece."

Freddie had been standing with his face slightly flushed, making no comment. Now he looked sheepish for an instant before he said "I guess I owe you an apology, Mr. Winkle."

For Fall Wardrobe

OF COURSE it's just as nice off the Campus as it is on—but it's the sort of frock high school and college girls want in their fall wardrobes! Make it up in flowered crepes for a "date" dress—in smart woollens for a classroom dress.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1954 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 12, short sleeves, requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material.

For Big or Little Girls

NO GIRL is too big, or too little—too old or too young—to look pretty in a dashing, beruffled pinafore! There's just nothing like them for comfort, charm and exquisite prettiness. Make yours in pale colors—in brilliant colors—in flowered cottons—in checks. They're all popular choices.

In grinding an ax on a motor driven emery wheel or grindstone, keep the fingers on the ax-head to test its temperature. If the metal gets uncomfortably hot in the hand, stop grinding to keep the ax from losing its temper.

Next time the cream won't whip try this: add the white of an egg to the cream, chill and try again.

To avoid a clean-up job after indoor painting, use a paper plate to hold the open paint can and the brush when attention must be turned elsewhere.

A half-teaspoon of oil of pepper mint added to the filling for chocolate pie gives a new and different flavor.

Two common causes of failure in pastry are too much working, and the addition of too much water. Flaky pie dough requires only enough water and handling to hold it together.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally there are 20 per cent more tire failures during the summer months than others. Tests have shown that at a temperature of 90 degrees tires wear out twice as fast as at 60 degrees and that at 100 degrees they wear out five times as fast as at 40 degrees.

Even with production being restored at Far East rubber plantations and our synthetic plants working at peak, authorities believe there will be a tight rubber situation for some time following the end of the war.

Tinley Servicemen's Letters

July 8, 1944

Dear Friends: Received your package with the cigarettes yesterday, want to thank you for sending them to me, I sure do appreciate it. I am sorry I haven't written sooner but since we have started aircraft mechanic school we haven't had much time to ourselves. This course is very interesting and we are learning a lot in a short time. Their method of teaching is a good deal like school back home and we also get homework, that makes it more so.

Well its getting late and thanks again for the cigarettes.

As ever,

Pvt. John Bellanti

Dutch New Guinea July 14, 1944

Citizens Service Com. Just a few lines from down under to let you know that I am OK. I was very glad to hear from you.

You asked me about the Tinley Park Times. I have received very few copies so I am behind on the news from home. The food hasn't been too good but we can't complain.

As far as needing anything I could use some toothpaste and some canned food to eat.

Here's hoping to see you all soon, but for now hello to everyone.

I remain,

Paul Schultdt

P. S. I thank you all for what you are doing for us local boys in service

Folks: Received the cigarettes you sent. Sure do appreciate getting them, makes a fellow feel good to know someone is thinking about him.

Am leaving here this Thursday. Will see you soon. Thanks.

Mrs. Moss: Thank you for your kind letters. I'm sorry I'm so slow in answering it's not that I'm so busy, it's just that there isn't anything to say except thanks for all you've done.

I still receive the Tinley Park Times and it's really the only link I have with the old town outside of the Citizens Service Comm. I always turn first to the Servicemen's letters to see how they are getting along. I haven't seen anyone from home in a long time.

I'm sorry to hear about the boys who have been wounded. I'm very proud to hear the home town has supported the War Bond drives so well.

So long for now. Freddie Willman

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Judge, would you mind tellin' Charlie here what you told me the other night walkin' home from lodge. I can't word it just the way you did."

"Sure thing, Tim. Here's what I told him, Charlie. There's no such thing as votin' a nation, a state, a county, or even a community dry. We had proof enough of that during our 13 years of prohibition. What you really vote for is whether liquor is going to be sold legally or illegally...whether the community is going to get needed taxes for schools, hospitals, and the like, or whether this money is going to go to gangsters and bootleggers. That's the answer, boys... simple as A-B-C."

A letter to the New Lenox Service Club from M. Sgt. Robert Sievert who is stationed in Italy. Dear Friends:

I received your most welcome birthday card yesterday and it was right on the dot, and want to thank each and every one of you. I'm waiting for the package now and will thank you all in advance for it. You know packages are one thing every body over here looks forward to getting as something from home always tastes better. Everything over here in Italy is about the same and we're kept busy most of the time. I'm still crew chief on B-24's and by the way still have the ship I left the states with. It has 31 missions and two German planes to its credit, so I'm quite proud of it although its all luck in keeping one this long.

I've a little surprise for you if you have't already found out. I was made Master Sgt. the first of July so I guess all there's left to sweat out is the war and from the way it looks most of us should be home by Christmas from this part of the country.

Something else I want to thank you for is the News-Bulletin. I get a lot of enjoyment from it especially the New Lenox news as I know most of the people. Guess that's all for this time, except keep your thumbs up. We'll all be home one of these days.

S'long, BOB

Lt. and Mrs. John Perrill and daughters enroute from their home in Iowa, to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station where the former will be an instructor, visited last week in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Greenman had as their guests over the holiday week end, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Greenman and Karen Sue of Rockford, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Paul Greenman and children of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Greenman and family of Homewood.

"YEP, good light sure makes a difference to us kids. Makes studying easier and pleasanter. Helps prevent headaches from eyestrain.

"That's why mom sent me to Public Service store for lamp bulbs. She said my eyes need protection.

"Besides, she doesn't want poor light to serve as an excuse for poor marks."

And another thing—you can get up to 50% more light by making sure bulbs, bowls, and shades are clean. For good information on the subject, get your copy of the wartime folder "Care and Use of Lamps and Lighting" at your Public Service store.

*LADY ATTENDANT EVERY DAY

ANY time you crawl out on the end of a limb, you've got to be ready for the limb to crack. We moved into that position recently when we attempted to name an all-time National league outfield.

In the wake of this nomination we "heard the shots fired around the world," including the South Pacific and the European front. Our nominations were Fred Clarke of the Pirates, Terry Moore of the Cardinals, Mel Ott of the Giants and Jimmy Sheckard of the Dodgers and the Cubs.

Then the fusillade opened — "What about Zach Wheat of the Dodgers?" "What about Ross Young of the Giants?" "What about Stan Musial of the Cardinals?" There were others—George Burns of the Giants, Mike Donlin of the Giants, Wildfire Schulte of the Cubs, Circus Solly Hofman of the same team, Roush of Cincinnati, Klein of Philadelphia, not forgetting Paul Waner of Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, Medwick of the Cardinals, Dodgers and Giants.

These were among the leading counter-attacks thrown at our top selections, covering only the last 40 years. That's as far back as we feel like walking, or looking.

In spite of the heavy barrage thrown in our direction, we still stick with our original pick, admitting that Mike Donlin, Zach Wheat, Paul Waner and Pep Young would be serious challengers.

Here is our testimony: Fred Clarke and Jimmy Sheckard, old-timers, are better than the modern crowd knows. Far better. Terry Moore is the best defensive outfielder the National league ever looked at, a ball player with a fiery spirit who was also a strong man on the offensive side, a normal .300 hitter.

I don't have to tell you any more about Mel Ott, the lone National leaguer who could match the best of the A. L. in power. Leave off Mel Ott and you slip in a machine gun for a howitzer or a navy 16-incher.

American League Better

I can name you two sets of American league outfielders who for total value outclass the pick of the National.

Here they are: No. 1—Cobb, Ruth, Speaker. No. 2—Joe Jackson, DiMaggio, Ted Williams.

This second American league outfield is much better than any top outfield we can pick from the National. There can't be any argument over Cobb, Speaker and Ruth, or Ruth, Cobb and Speaker. And they have only a brief nod over Jackson, DiMaggio and Williams, especially on the run-making side.

I don't believe my fervid assaulters can pick a National league outfield as good as the second American league trio I have named. Those who think they can would make poor scouts.

Bill Dickey will tell you that Ted Williams was the greatest hitter he ever saw and Bill played with Ruth, Gehrig and DiMaggio. DiMaggio was something more than a great hitter. Joe was a great ball player, about 50-50 with Tris Speaker on defense.

Into Deeper Trouble

Here is a race where we ran a poor last.

A marine sergeant sent us this problem from somewhere in the Pacific, a problem starting an uproar with several hundred dollars bet:

It seems that with two out the next man up took a swing at the third strike. He missed the strike but the ball struck his shoulder, bounded away, and he ran to first.

The marine sergeant claimed he was out. The infantry didn't think so.

I agreed with the infantry. Trusting foolishly to memory and intuition I figured he must be safe. I wrote the sergeant to this effect. Now, Ford Frick, president of the National league, writes me that I was wrong.

"The batter was out," he says. "If on a third strike the ball touches any part of the batter, he is out automatically."

I still can't understand why, as on a third strike the batter can run on a ball thrown into the dirt or on a wild pitch.

I only hope the marine sergeant doesn't sue me and I can only promise that on the next matter of rules I will consult Ford Frick before attempting to make any decision.

Golf for Cripples

The most remarkable golfer I recall was one who had both arms cut off just at the two shoulders. He swung the club head with the shaft of his club held between the chin and neck. I've forgotten his name but he used to play around 100.

There have also been cases of men totally blind playing at least fairly well with caddies to show them the right line and estimate the distance for the next shot. One blind Canadian soldier broke a hundred.

Wartime Protein Substitutes Tested

Corn Gluten Mash With Linseed Meal Effective

Using not more than four pounds of the usual protein feeds in 100 of chick starter, compared with 12 to 16 or more before the war, University of Wisconsin specialists have devised rations giving results comparable to those of prewar times.

The basic wartime ration, which worked tolerably well, proved somewhat deficient in vitamins. It included: ground yellow corn, 45 lbs.; wheat bran, 15 lbs.; wheat middlings, 15 lbs.; alfalfa leaf meal, 5 lbs.; meat scrap, 4 lbs.; soybean oilmeal, 16 lbs.; limestone grit, 1.5 lbs.; granite grit, 1.5 lbs.; iodized salt, 0.5 lb.; sardine oil, 0.5 lb.; and manganese sulfate, 0.8 lb.

When the protein feeds were three pounds of a special fish meal, with vitamin content preserved, and 16 of soybean oilmeal, the results were as good as with prewar protein combinations.

The basis ration was improved by using, instead of sardine oil, from 1 to 2 per cent commercial vitamin D powder of a kind which contains whey solubles and fish liver solids, and which therefore carries B vitamins as well as vitamin D.

Due to soybean oilmeal, it was found that part of the soybean oilmeal can be satisfactorily replaced by corn gluten meal and linseed meal, although a chick ration should not contain more than 5 per cent linseed meal.

One of the best protein feed combinations employing "substitutes for the substitute" proved to be meat scrap, 4; soybean oilmeal, 6; linseed meal, 5; corn gluten meal, 5.

Although a chick starter carrying 20 parts of protein feed in 100 is satisfactory where pullets are to be raised for layers, there is an advantage in using more protein where fast growth is highly important. In producing broilers it is well to use 4 parts of meat scrap and 20 of soybean oilmeal, instead of 4 and 16.

Agriculture In the News

Bees' Importance

More than 10,000 years ago man was using beeswax in mummification and the coffins in which the embalmed bodies were placed were made airtight by means of beeswax.

Before the war the main use for beeswax was in cosmetics — lipsticks, cold cream and rouge. Now its number one use is for water-proofing and protecting shells, belts, coils and machinery, as well as airplanes.

Today as 10,000 years ago the bee serves another very essential use, the pollinizing of flowers to aid in the increased production of fruit and many forage crops. While always recognized, the value of honey as a sugar substitute, has increased materially during the war.

Beeswax has played another important part in commerce, it has been employed in the making of artificial flowers and other articles of art. Its present war uses, however, have discouraged further development along this line.

Hog Cholera Danger

With the large number of pigs now on farms increasing the opportunity for hog cholera and other infections to spread, farmers in the important pork-producing middle-western states are immunizing their animals against cholera at an earlier age than in the past, according to U. S. department of agriculture reports. A small proportion are reported to have received treatment before weaning, but veterinarians recommend about two weeks after weaning for the best and longest lasting results. Immunization of pigs at about ten weeks is expected to result in smaller losses from hog cholera, as well as less danger of checking growth by means of the treatment when they are older, and especially while being fattened for market.

Laying hens now average 142 eggs annually, or twice as many as they laid 20 years ago.

Coccidiosis in Lambs

Coccidiosis in lambs may be successfully prevented by the addition of ground crude sulphur to their feed in proportions ranging from 0.5 to 1.5 per cent of the ration, the U. S. department of agriculture has determined by experiments in cooperation with large feeding establishments. Coccidiosis is a parasitic condition that often has serious if not fatal consequences. It is commonly acquired from infected pastures or feedlots.

Gun Shy

By CLYDE B. HOUGH
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

WHEN Hyder fumbled his rifle and dropped it, that first morning at drill, most of us recruits and some of the older heads snickered. "Silence in the ranks," thundered Sergeant Kane.

Hyder made no move to recover his rifle—just stood staring down at it in trancelike horror. "Don't be afraid of it, guy," Kane said. "It won't bite anybody but them Axis bums."

But Hyder was afraid of a gun; all guns, as we learned later. His hands would tremble every time he touched one. So, naturally, he drew a low rating in rank-and-file judgment. His only champion was Barry, another rookie. "I know the guy. You fellows don't," Barry told us in the squad room.

"We know he's afraid of guns. He must be yellow," came the answer. "You're wrong, all of you," Barry argued. "Hyder and I were raised in the same town, on the same block. He's no coward—just gun shy. Born that way, same as some people are born with blue eyes, others brown."

Someone said, "Bah, he's . . ." and cut the speech short. Another glanced toward the door but immediately looked away.

Hyder seemed rooted on the threshold, towhead thrust forward, eyes squinting, his squat body taut, hard.

For a moment, he held his belligerent pose and then, eyes straight ahead, he walked slowly and deliberately down the aisle between the two rows of cots. He stopped before his friend. "Thanks, Barry," he said, and turned and left the room.

"Well, guts or no guts," said Sergeant Kane, "no gun-shy son will ever be any good in this man's army."

I saw a towhead bobbing and weaving.

"Hyder could be," Barry contended. "He was a hotel cook before the draft got him. A good one, too, and he likes the work."

"A cook, huh?" Kane mused. "That's a way for me to get him off my hands. Think I'll see the mess sarge about it."

That was back in barracks. Now this was Bataan and the jungle and the Nips. We were on outpost duty, Barry and Hyder with us. Sergeant Kane was in charge. Eight of the men rested in pup tents while four others watched from foxholes out front. Behind the tents, in a tiny clearing where we'd chopped away the creepers and the thick bush, Hyder was cooking our noonday meal.

Yes, Barry had been right. The gun-shy lad could really cook and he loved the job, too. I watched him now, bending over the stew pot, pouring in special seasoning he'd concocted from native spices.

As he stepped back from the cauldron he nodded at me and yelled, "Come and get it." But right then things happened all at once. The little monkey men swarmed out of the jungle. No noise, no warning till the bullets whistled through the mist.

"Rush for the tents and grab a Garand," I shouted at Hyder and acted on my own advice. The next few minutes were a mad whirl—shots cracking, bayonets twirling, men reeling, going down. My arms were weak from the shock of thrust and parry. Then suddenly the surging tide of Nips swerved and we stood in the clear. I glanced toward the cook pots and saw a towhead bobbing and weaving, surrounded by Japs. The squat body and heavy shoulders heaved to the swing of a baseball bat.

I moved fast, Barry and Sergeant Kane running beside me. We hit that circle and speared us a Nip apiece; Hyder was still swinging. We got through to him and the yellow boys scattered. Barry and Kane carried him to a tent and I looked at the red-smeared weapon lying on the ground. There were eighteen dead Japs sprawled one upon another—every head busted by Hyder's favorite instrument.

In the tent Sergeant Kane was swabbing a wound in Hyder's thigh. A bayonet thrust had got him. His shirt was off and there was a long slash across his ribs.

I said, "You did wrong, buddy. According to rules, you should have ducked those Nips and joined the rest of us, back to back. How come 'But they were after our chow,' he protested. 'They hooked that pot of stew and tried to run with it. How could I let them get away with it?'"

While Walter Winchell is away, this month, his column will be conducted by guest columnists.

Lady, Learn to Cook or Your GI Will Go Home to The Army!

By Captain Ben Irvin Butler
(Founder and President of the Society of Amateur Chefs.)

"Sitting by the roadside on a Summer day
"Chatting with my mess-mates, passing time away—
"Singing in the shadows underneath the trees:
"Goodness — how de-li-ci-ous — eating
GOOBER PEAS!"

That's an old Civil war song. And it goes to show that in all wars upmost in the soldier's mind is food. I should spell that word with capitals—FOOD.

Zora Layman, the radio and recording artist, sang "Eating Goober Peas" the other night at a cocktail party. I don't know whether it was her singing or what, but Zora Layman's song practically started a riot. I was the center of it all.

The women at the party began asking me questions. They wanted to know all about Army food. And believe me, I told 'em! I told them both as an ex-Air Corps captain and as the founder of the Society of Amateur Chefs, an exclusive New York club composed of famous men who make a hobby of cooking.

First of all, I explained about this business of KP.

The movies and fiction have painted kypee mostly as a business of peeling potatoes and cleaning garbage cans. But that's a lot of nonsense. Many soldiers try to get on KP. And why not—the kitchen is one of the warmest spots around the camp in the winter time. The duties are easy enough. And there's always the pick of a well-stocked larder from which to select one's food. I'm not kidding. Instead of being a punishment job handed out by the army to recalcitrants, kypee is one detail GI Joe doesn't mind.

According to Bill Rhode, who is one of the editors of Gourmet, many of their fan letters come from soldiers and sailors. I had lunch with Bill the other day and he told me how many requests for epicurean recipes there had been from men in the various services. That very day, he'd received a letter from an Admiral asking how to smoke herring.

The slogan, "the best fed Army in the world," has been tossed around a great deal. People don't any longer grasp entirely what it means.

The Army kitchen is no harum-scarum affair. In many instances it is an electrical job, spick-and-span, offering an open invitation to good cookery. It has everything in the way of equipment and, believe me, the medical officers see to it that it is as sanitary as a kitchen can possibly be made. No foolin'—you can just about see your face in the bottom of an Army garbage can.

Thousands of Army lads have been carefully trained in cooking, butchering and baking and most of them have become good cooks. Some, at least, have become efficient cooks, although perhaps uninspired. And then, of course, some will never learn. Hence the discrepancy between reports from various camps and units. Some men will rave about the food they enjoyed in their outfit. Others will keep on yearning for Mother's beef stew and apple pie. But, take it from me, very few are telling their pals what a wonderful cook the girl is they left behind.

And there's something else I told the ladies at the cocktail party to ponder over.

Though the Army food wins no squawks, the GIs occasionally yearn for the finer things of life. For instance, a nephew of mine, John Piper, who is an Army pilot somewhere in the South Pacific, upon learning that I was back in New York, wrote to me for a recipe for Wild Duck a la Press. My old mess sergeant, now stationed in a southern climate, inquired as to how to make a tart lime marmalade.

Another inquiry came to me from a service man far away—I'll let you guess — asking how to make "Tulles." These are thin wafers that accompany curry when the latter is served in the elegant manner.

An officer connected with the Army's dietary service told me that he'd had an inquiry from a mess sergeant asking how to make wine out of berries—a reasonable enough request—only the Army doesn't give out with answers to such questions.

They Know Now All Food
Doesn't Come Out of Cans!

With repeal came the renaissance of American gastronomy. Slowly, an interest in good food returned. But with the War, millions of boys are learning and discovering that all food does not come out of tin cans. And this interest is growing by leaps and bounds. In camps, soldiers have eaten freshly baked bread and the old "cotton wadding" type of bread from the corner grocery store won't have much appeal to these boys in the future.

ASK ME ANOTHER?

A General Quiz

The Questions

1. What conquering armies have marched through the streets of Berlin within the last two centuries?
2. How many Presidents of the United States have been under 50 when inaugurated?
3. The Bible tells of a man who fastened firebrands onto the tails of foxes and sent them into the cornfields of his enemies. Who was he?
4. By what method do the members of Finland's parliament vote?
5. Who delivered the famous Cooper Union address?
6. What do the British call our baby flat-tops or escort carriers?
7. If an enlisted man's cap is piped in light blue, what does it signify?
8. What products constitute in tonnage half of the supplies shipped overseas by the United States to our allies and our armed forces?
9. One coast of India is on the Bay of Bengal. The other is on what sea?
10. Why are women able to sing at a higher pitch than men?

The Answers

1. The Russian troops of Catherine the Great in 1760, and the Old Guards of Napoleon in 1806.
2. Six.
3. Samson (Judges 15:4, 5).
4. They press a "yes" or "no" button on their desk. Thus they can pass a bill within 90 seconds.
5. Abraham Lincoln.
6. "Woolworth carriers."
7. That he is an infantryman.
8. Petroleum products.
9. Arabian sea.
10. Women are able to sing at a much higher pitch than men because their vocal cords, five twelfths of an inch in length, vibrate from 200 to 800 times a second, or twice as fast as men's cords, which are seven twelfths of an inch in length.

Electrification Presents

Some Difficult Problems

When a large piece of equipment is transported over an electrified section of an American railroad, a nine-inch overhead clearance must be maintained so the high-voltage current will not jump from the trolley wire to the shipment and cause a short circuit, says Collier's.

In cases where this clearance is decreased by the lower wires in tunnels and under bridges, the power is shut off as a safety measure and the train has to coast or be pushed or pulled by a steam engine through and under them.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking--its risk of exposure and infection--throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling--feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
